Dear Ms. McDonald:

I spoke with Martha at Joel Solomon's office today. I had hoped to speak with Joel, but I was informed that Joel is at a conference of Social Venture Network and cannot easily be reached.

We had received a letter from him requesting information on our situation. One of our board members last week was able to speak with him to fill him in, that we have raised a significant amount of money from subscribers and we are handling it conservatively until we can make our decision to go forward, or not.

Two board members will be travelling to Chile on the 10th to discuss a possible grant from the Foundation for Deep Ecology, whose principal resides there.The grant would not be formally committed, in any case, until their 1997 funding cycle. However, for us to receive funds from them we would need to be able to renegotiate the section of our agreement with you and Joel that is mentioned in my fax.

David Katz, our acting publisher this summer, understood from a conversation with Joel that there could be some openness to such a renegotiation if it were essential for our progress.

I faxed Joel last week hoping for a reconfirmation of such an openness. The time window for the required trip to Chile is a narrow one, so we will need to leave on the 10th as planned. We look forward to being in touch when we return, after the 21st. If either of you would like to respond in the mean time, please contact General Manager Michael Stone at the Point office.

Enclosed is a copy of my fax to Joel.

Thank you for your consideration.

Yours sincerely,

Tyrone Cashman
